

The power of New Jersey to protect its citizens is crucial to the people of our state. Our Federal system demands that states must be able to legislate as they deem proper unless the legislation interferes with federal law. The fact that the state expands the protection does not lessen or impair the reach of federal law.